

Sanya

Sanya's tropical rainforest is one of the most biologically diverse regions on Earth. Entering this mysterious tropical rainforest, you will be amazed by its dense vegetation and vibrant ecosystem. Tall banyan trees, lush vines, and a variety of rare flowers and herbs intertwine to form a colorful natural landscape. Here, you can discover many rare species, such as the critically endangered Hainan gibbon and the graceful pheasant deer, as they freely roam through the rainforest, showcasing the wonders and mysteries of nature.

At the same time, Sanya is the main habitat of the Li people, an ancient ethnic group known for its unique brocade weaving, embroidery, bamboo craft, and traditional singing and dancing. The Li people live in harmony with nature, respecting and protecting it, and this philosophy is deeply rooted in their culture.

In the Sanya tropical rainforest, you can deeply feel the profound emotional bond between the Li people and nature, as well as their commitment to preserving and passing on traditional culture. This magical land has not only bred rich biodiversity but also given birth to the unique culture and lifestyle of the Li people, allowing every visitor to experience a culturally unique journey.
